

Welcome to the 2010 - 2011 Season of the Southampton Cultural Center Chamber Music Series!

This year the series continues to present a diverse range of concerts from standard chamber music repertoire for string quartet

Marc Levine

and piano quintet to contemporary classics and, this year, a full Baroque opera, Handel's Acis and Galatea, performed by Stony Brook Opera and Baroque Players. Cellist

Soo Bae will present an exciting solo cello program including her own arrangements, always eclectic Yarn/Wire will present a concert for two pianos and percussion and I have no doubt that the Stony Brook Contemporary Chamber Players will again fill the Center with a truckfull of instruments! I am especially excited to announce that the SCC Chamber Players will be joined by renowned pianist and Stony Brook University faculty member, Christina Dahl, on May 1 in a performance of the monumental Brahms piano quintet.

I welcome you to a fantastic year and look forward to seeing you!

STONY BROOK UNIVERSITY ENSEMBLES

Stony Brook Opera and Baroque Players
Handel's Acis and Galatea
Sunday, February 13 at 3:00 PM

The shepherd Acis loves the goddess Galatea. Unfortunately for them both, the one-eyed monster, Polyphemus has his "eye" on Galatea. Classic love triangle? Who will have their way? Can the lovers avert the monster's wrath? Combine this dramatic plot with George Frederik Handel's enchanting one-act score, and you are in store for a delightful afternoon of music making. Stony Brook University's opera workshop combines with the Stony Brook Baroque Players for this great musical event.

Stony Brook Contemporary Chamber Players
Sunday, April 17 at 3:00 PM

The ever-entertaining Contemporary Chamber Players are sure to please with performances of modern classics that make full use of a wide variety of percussion instruments. Come to see if CCP repeats the theatrics of their last visit where they placed drum sets throughout the hall surrounding the audience.
